Tories End Party Split Over EEC Near Unanimity On Future Policy

BLACKPOOL, England, Oct. 13 (AP).—Britain's governing Conservative party today buried its internal strife over joining the Common Market and ended the government's future policy in a near-unanimous vote. The party's annual conference in Blackpool today ended with a vote of 99 to 1 in favor of joining the European Economic Community (EEC) after Britain joins Jan. 1, 1973. It did so after Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home edged the government's determination to help make the new large community "a partner in peace."

Muskie Cites Campaign 'Sabotage' Including Use of His Letterhead

By Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (WP).—Sen. Edmund S. Muskie has charged that his presidential candidacy was victimized by "a systematic campaign of sabotage," including the use of his letterhead to make false allegations that two of his Democratic party opponents had engaged in illicit sexual acts.

Sen. Muskie, D. Maine, made the assertion to a Washington Post reporter a week before it was disclosed that federal investigators had uncovered an apparently unprecedented spying and sabotage campaign against the Democrats, conducted on behalf of President Nixon's re-election and directed by presidential aides.

During his unsuccessful campaign for the nomination, Sen. Muskie said, documents were stolen from his files; voters were awakened by middle-of-the-night phone calls from imposters claiming to be "Muskie canvassers"; false items were planted in newspapers, and facsimiles of his envelopes were used to mail embarrassing material under the senator's name.

Vietnam Slack By Inauguration Seen by Scott

By Inauguration Seen by Scott

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP).—Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott, R., Pa., yesterday predicted that the United States "warlike participation" in Vietnam will be over by Jan. 20, the presidential inauguration day.

Brief Hint on Talks Many Bars to Peace Remain, U.S. Implies

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP).—The White House today indirectly confirmed that many barriers still block a Vietnam settlement following presidential aide Henry A. Kissinger's most extensive huddle with the North Vietnamese.

Reds Capture Base 200 U.S. Jets Raid North, Avoid Hanoi

SAIGON, Oct. 13 (AP).—More than 200 tactical air strikes were launched by U.S. planes yesterday against North Vietnam, including a number of new targets along the rail lines linking Hanoi with China, the U.S. command announced today.

A second attack against the Duc Co Ranger camp, near Hanoi, was beaten off, but the garrison suffered heavy losses. North Vietnamese long-range 130-mm artillery, 122-mm rockets and heavy mortars rained 1,500 shells on Ben Het and its garrison of more than 300 South Vietnamese Border Rangers, most of them Montagnard tribesmen.

Chile Seizes Radio Stations As Strikes Defy Emergency

SANTIAGO, Chile, Oct. 13 (AP).—Chile's leftist government took over all radio stations today as small businessmen and shopkeepers, defying a state of emergency, claimed that their national sympathy strike with striking truckers was almost completely successful.

Watergate Suspects Are Tied To Justice Department Leaks

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (NYT).—Robert C. Mardian, a former assistant attorney general, obtained confidential information from the Justice Department for potential use in President Nixon's political campaign after leaving the government to work for the Committee for the Re-Election of the President, according to sources close to the Watergate investigation.

Senate Passes $74.3-Billion Defense Appropriations Bill

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP).—The Senate passed by voice vote and sent to President Nixon today a comprehensive $74.3-billion defense appropriations bill.

U.S. Hits EEC Plan to Set Up A Mediterranean Trade Zone

PARIS, Oct. 13 (NYT).—The United States has formally protested Common Market plans to establish a preferential trading zone with nonmember Mediterranean countries, diplomatic sources said today.

Senate Votes to Ban All SSTs From Landing at U.S. Airports

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (Reuters).—The Senate voted today to ban the Anglo-French Concorde and Russian Tu-144 supersonic airliners from landing at U.S. airports because of their noise.

Other Stories

The men who broke into the Democratic National Committee headquarters in the Watergate complex here last June 17 also went there on other occasions, the sources said.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP).—A joint U.S.-Soviet commission resumed "very intense negotiations" yesterday in trying to reach a trade agreement between the two countries.

Described as Veteran's

McGovern Uses Tape to Tell Crowd of Bombing Horrors

By Christopher Lydon

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 13 (NYT).—George McGovern used a tape-recorded voice of a man, identifying himself as a Vietnam veteran and chock-full of remorse, to tell an overflowed crowd in the quad of the University of Minnesota yesterday about American war in Indochina.

A man spoke of finding a body in the remains of a village "fused" to by napalm. They were pieces of metal that had soldered, he said. "Somebody couldn't tell whether it was people or animals."

A seven-minute recording thrust on Sen. McGovern in a yesterday morning by a Williams, host of a radio show on which the unidentified caller, who said he returned March from a year in Vietnam, poured out his anguish about the war.

McGovern first heard the on the flight from Boston

this afternoon. His eyes glistened with tears as he listened. At the end of his campus speech denouncing the Nixon administration's Vietnam policy, the Democratic presidential nominee asked the students to hear a description that he said, "comes a great deal closer to what's going on than what we hear from Mr. Nixon."

Crowd of 15,000
After the bombers have struck, "you can't find even the bugs" on the ground, the man's voice sobbed over giant loudspeakers facing the stunned crowd of about 15,000.

"I didn't have the courage then to say it was wrong," the soldier said. "You come back and you see your family, and you understand what you've done."

Soldiers who had "the guts to say it was wrong" were discharged as "unfit for military duty," he said. "We were fit because we condoned it, we rationalized it."

Sen. McGovern said he was relying on Mr. Williams's word that the voice was authentic. His use of the tape made for an extraordinarily emotional moment, even in a campaign that has been fueled from the beginning by the passion of the anti-war movement. Sen. McGovern's aides said the senator had asked them to play the recording on campus, without much hesitation or political calculation, simply because he himself had been so moved by it.

Sen. McGovern told the silent mass of students when the recording ended: "Well, I guess there's nothing much to say after that, except that this is a young man who has spoken the truth. Let's go out and do what we have to do and put a new leadership in charge of this country next year."

Mrs. McGovern in Hospital
WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP).—Mrs. Eleanor McGovern, wife of the Democratic nominee, has been admitted to a hospital after complaining of abdominal pain.

A spokesman said Mrs. McGovern, 50, complained of acute pain last night as she wound up an eight-day campaign trip with a speech at Frederick, Md. She was examined by her physician and admitted for observation to Georgetown University Hospital. The doctor said Mrs. McGovern was resting comfortably.

Last December, Mr. Liddy moved from the White House Intelligence group to the President's re-election committee as financial counsel and continued to call Mr. Mardian for information, the sources said.

Last spring when Mr. Mardian also joined the committee, he began to make calls to the Justice Department asking former associates for information, they said.

On at least one occasion Mr. Mardian sent Mr. Liddy and Mr. Hunt to a former associate in the department to pick up information, the sources said.

14,500 Walk Out At 3 GM Plants
DETROIT, Oct. 13 (UPI).—Workers at three General Motors Corp. assembly plants walked off their jobs today. The strike by more than 14,500 employees accompanied a threat to shut down all the automaker's assembly plants in North America.

Disputes at Mansfield, Ohio, Doraville, Ga., and St. Louis, Mo., ranged from production standards to a breakdown of negotiations on a new local agreement with the General Motors assembly division.

"Continuation of the strike will result in the curtailment of nearly the entire automotive production throughout the corporation, and also affect many thousands of outside firms," a GM spokesman said.

Muskie Says His Campaign Faced 'Systematic Sabotage'

"attempt to embarrass Senator Kennedy and me." Postal inspectors did not determine who sent the letters, which were mailed to Democratic members of Congress and resulted in complaints to Sen. Muskie about unethical campaigning.

Disruption of a Muskie fundraising dinner at the Washington Hilton on April 17, according to James Goodbody, the Muskie campaign's finance chairman, the following items arrived at the dinner—collect on delivery: $300 worth of liquor, a large $50 floral arrangement, cakes from the Watergate pastry shop and 200 pizzas. About a dozen African diplomats were telephoned and invited to the dinner by persons posing as Muskie aides. Chauffeur-driven limousines were ordered for the diplomats, Mr. Goodbody said, and as a final touch—two magicians were mysteriously sent, including one who flew in from the Virgin Islands. The magicians said they had been hired to entertain children, but there were no children at the dinner. According to the former Muskie aide, most of the bills for the unwired services remain unpaid.

Several days before the Florida primary election a leaflet was distributed in parts of the state on Muskie stationery. It accused two of Sen. Muskie's Democratic opponents, Senators Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, and Henry M. Jackson of Washington, of illicit sexual activity.

Sen. Muskie's administrative aide, John McEvoy, recalling an incident widely reported during the New Hampshire primary election campaign, said, "A number of Manchester residents complained of receiving phone calls in the middle of the night from people who identified themselves as canvassers from the Harlem for Muskie Committee. They were calling New Hampshire people to urge them to vote for Muskie because he'd been so good for the black man."

According to federal investigators, Democratic candidates and members of their staffs and families were followed by Nixon operatives as part of an "offensive security" program—the term for the sabotage-and-spying operation reportedly used inside the White House and at the Committee for the Re-Election of the President. Investigators have said that at least one of Sen. Muskie's children was the subject of investigation by Nixon operatives.

Blacks, Whites Battle on U.S. Carrier; 33 Hurt

HONOLULU, Oct. 13 (AP).—A fight involving black and white sailors aboard the attack carrier Kitty Hawk off Vietnam yesterday left 33 men injured, three seriously, the Pacific Fleet command reported today.

Two of the injured were flown to shore-based hospitals for treatment and another was scheduled to be flown ashore, a Navy spokesman said. The remainder were treated for minor injuries aboard the ship and returned to duty, he said.

The Navy said, "Order has been fully restored" aboard the carrier and it is "continuing to perform its mission at Yankee Station," in the Tonkin Gulf.

The Kitty Hawk commanding officer, Capt. Martin W. Townsend Jr., of Washington, D.C., and the executive officer, Cmdr. Benjamin W. Cloud, of El Cajon, Calif., have talked to crewmen about the incident in hope of preventing a recurrence, the spokesman said.

Other Navy officials are also investigating.

Further details on the incident were not immediately available, the spokesman said.

Wife Divorces Longest POW

SAN JOSE, Calif., Oct. 13 (AP).—Hacienda Alvarez, the wife of the first American pilot shot down in Vietnam and captured by the North Vietnamese, obtained a Mexican divorce and has been remarried for two years, according to the pilot's mother.

Mrs. Alvarez's family and lawyer also confirmed that she is seeking a divorce in Alameda County from Navy Lt. Everett Alvarez, 34, whose plane was shot down over the Gulf of Tonkin on Aug. 15, 1964.

They were married for only two months when he was sent to Vietnam.

3 GOP Aides Target of Fla. Court Order

MIAMI, Oct. 13 (AP).—A judge has ordered three top Republican fund-raisers extradited to Florida as material witnesses in the trial of Watergate defendant Bernard L. Barker.

Mr. Barker, one of five men arrested June 17 in the alleged break-in at the Democratic National Committee offices in Washington's Watergate center, is charged here with misuse of a notary's public seal in Florida.

Dade County Criminal Court Judge Paul Baker signed orders yesterday to extradite former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans, Kenneth E. Dahlberg and Hugh W. Sloan. The judge said all three must appear Oct. 25 when Mr. Barker goes on trial for the notary seal's alleged misuse on a $25,000 check.

The judge's order said the appearance of the three GOP fund-raisers could "not be secured voluntarily."

Courts in Minnesota, Washington, D.C., and Virginia would have to rule on the extradition order if the three men refused to appear. Mr. Stans, Mr. Dahlberg and Mr. Sloan held positions on the President's re-election committee. Mr. Dahlberg lives in Wayzata, Minn. Mr. Stans in Washington and Mr. Sloan in McLean, Va.

"They will be needed for approximately 12 days unless sooner discharged," the judge wrote. The 12 days would end on election day—Nov. 7.

Seal Put on Check
Mr. Barker, 55, a former Central Intelligence Agency operative, is accused of using his notary seal to fraudulently acknowledge Mr. Dahlberg's signature on a $25,000 cashier's check.

The money, part of $108,000 given to the Committee for the Re-Election of the President, went through Mr. Barker's bank account at the Republic National Bank of Miami prior to June 17. On June 17, Mr. Barker was arrested with four others inside the Democratic offices in the Watergate complex.

Mr. Barker's attorneys yesterday subpoenaed the Associated Press, United Press International, 33 radio stations and six television stations in the Miami area to appear at a pretrial hearing. The subpoenas sought tapes, transcripts and files of news stories concerning "the Watergate case."

State Attorney Richard Gerstein said he understood that the defense subpoenaed the media files as the basis for a motion to dismiss the charges due to alleged adverse pretrial publicity.

Mr. Gerstein said he expected the trial to start on schedule. "As I have said before, I think it is definitely in the public interest for the trial to start before the election," said Mr. Gerstein, a Democrat.

Quake in Aleutians

BERKELEY, Calif., Oct. 13 (AP).—A strong earthquake occurred in the region of the Fox Islands last evening, the University of California seismograph station here reported. A station spokesman said the earthquake was centered 2,450 miles northwest of Berkeley. The Fox Islands are located at the western tip of the Alaska peninsula and form part of the Aleutian Islands chain.

Including $2.3-Billion Works Bill

Congress Speeds Legislation In Rush to Wind Up Session

By Spencer Rich

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (WP).—Congress is in a push toward final adjournment, with legislators hoping for a windup tomorrow but fearing they may have to stay over until next week.

Having killed the anti-busing bill, the Senate began clearing up odds and ends yesterday and rushing through last-minute legislation.

The Senate passed a $2.3-billion authorization for accelerated public works and the nation's seven regional development commissions, after adding a White House-opposed provision for aid to workers and business hurt by U. S. environment control orders. If it ever emerges from a House-Senate conference, the bill probably will be vetoed, White House sources said.

The compromise bill to share $30.2 billion in federal revenue with state and local governments, approved yesterday by the House, was voted by the Senate today, 59-16 and sent to the White House.

State Airport Taxes

Today, Congress sent to the White House a bill prohibiting states and communities from imposing a tax on airline passenger tickets. The measure, passed finally in the Senate by voice vote, exempts New Hampshire until next July 1, because of its long tax history to May 21, 1970.

Additionally, any airport authority would be excluded if the tax levy goes exclusively toward paying off an airport project and the authority has no other legal way to pay the loan off. This exemption also ends next July 1. Other last-minute actions yesterday were:

● Adoption by both bodies of the $2.3-billion military construction appropriation.

● Final passage of permanent authority for the Youth Conservation Corps, which provides summer jobs in the Interior and Agriculture Departments.

● House approval of a bill authorizing $175 million more in shipbuilding subsidies, principally to build five new giant super-tankers to carry liquid gas.

● Senate passage of the conference report on the bill revising the Older Americans Act to enlarge special programs for the elderly, create a new Senior Service Corps and upgrade the Administration on the Aging by placing it in the office of the secretary of health, education and welfare instead of under a subcommittee of the House.

● Final agreement by a House-Senate conference on legislation to create a consumer product agency to monitor the safety of such devices as electric blankets and appliances, but not foods, drugs and cosmetics, which will remain under the jurisdiction of the Food and Drug Administration, nor firearms nor motor vehicles.

● Senate approval of House amendments to a bill creating a new national institute on the aging within the Public Health Service and setting up a program for the aging at community mental health centers. The bill now goes to the White House.

● Senate clearance of a $593 million authorization for federal water projects, and bills to establish the Cumberland Island National Seashore in Georgia, a Golden Gate National Recreation Area in San Francisco and Marin County, Calif., and to provide for federal administration of the manzanita and 17-acre Mar-a-Lago estate near Palm Beach, donated by Marjorie Merriweather Post. These measures now go to the President.

● Senate approval of a $5.2 billion catchall supplemental appropriations bill, the session's final funding measure. The House bill totaled $3.5 billion. But most of the increase was for administration-requested funds for education programs.

● House approval of the conference report on the $4.7-billion State, Justice and Commerce Department appropriation. The measure provides $350,000 for continuing the Subversive Activities Control Board, but bars the board from undertaking any new functions assigned by the President, thereby leaving it without any functions at all. The Senate, which put in the prohibition, had also sought to kill all funds for the agency.

In providing $176.2 million for international organizations, conferees agreed to a Senate provision continuing the U. S. share of payments to the United Nations at the present 31 percent through 1973, instead of cutting it back to 25 percent now.

● House approval, 198 to 99, of the conference compromise on a pesticide control bill. The measure would give the Environmental Protection Agency giving authority over dangerous sprays, and would entitle manufacturers to government payment for supplies on hand when a product is banned from sale.

Chinese Doctors Arrive in U.S. to Visit White House

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP).—The first Chinese physicians to visit the United States since the early 1950s arrived in Washington today to start a coast-to-coast tour to see what's new in American medicine.

Tight security regulations have been laid down to safeguard their coming and going in six American cities. Their visit is sponsored and funded by private U. S. scientific and medical organizations.

Although the U. S. government is reported to have no official hand in the visit, as was true of other U. S.-China visits, the 10 doctors, including two women, are scheduled to visit the White House tomorrow morning.

India Opens Road 17,800 Feet High

LEH, India, Oct. 13 (Reuters).—India has opened one of the highest roads in the world, through the 17,800-foot Khardungla Pass across the Ladakh Range of the Himalayas.

The Kashmir Minister for Ladakh Affairs, Thakur Ragbir Singh, led a convoy of five vehicles across the snow-covered pass.

The 95-mile-long road will connect Leh, in the Indus Valley, 185 miles east of the Kashmir capital of Srinagar, with the Nubra Valley, which leads to the Karakoram Pass into China. The highest road in the world is one 733 miles long between Tibet and southwestern Szechuan, completed in 1957, which attains altitudes of 18,480 feet.

Hayakawa Resigns As S.F. College Head

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 13 (UPI).—S. I. Hayakawa, the professor who brought an end to campus riots at San Francisco State College three years ago, resigned today as the university's president.

Prof. Hayakawa, a Japanese-American, a senator who was chosen to be president of the troubled campus during a student-teacher strike in 1968, said he would remain on campus as "president emeritus" of the school, renamed last year as California State University, San Francisco.

Three Killed In Dope-Sale Battle in N.Y.

Federal Agent Slain With Two Suspects

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (AP).—A federal undercover agent and two suspected cocaine dealers were shot dead in a motel gunfight here last night when a trap laid by U. S. narcotics detectives backfired, officials said. A supervisory agent was critically wounded.

The two men reportedly had agreed to sell the undercover man 10 kilograms of cocaine for $160,000 but then, in a double-cross, tried to rob the agent without delivering the drugs. The dead agent was identified as Frank Tummallo, 35.

He had made contact with the two men two weeks ago, officials said, and the pair agreed to sell him the cocaine.

A meeting was set up for last night in the Sheraton Motor Inn.

Frank Monastero, associate regional director of the bureau, said today that Mr. Tummallo and another agent were in room 1006 with the money in an attached case when the pair arrived. Mr. Monastero gave this account:

After agreeing on the price, the two men left, ostensibly to get the drugs. The second agent took the money into an adjoining room, where other agents were hiding.

Falls a Gun
About 11 p.m., the two men returned.

One pulled a gun on Mr. Tummallo, who was unarmed, and demanded the money. While one braced Mr. Tummallo against the wall the second searched the bathroom, looking for the attached case.

The supervisory agent entered room 1005 with his gun drawn to make arrests. He was shot from behind in the neck and leg by the man in the bathroom.

The other man then shot Mr. Tummallo. The men tried to flee and were shot dead by agents in the hallway.

The suspects were identified as Jose Nieves, 27, considered a major drug trafficker, and Jose Matia. No narcotics were found.

Arms and Security

On election day the American public will have the opportunity to choose between two sharply divergent formulas for defending the security of the nation.

President Nixon, adhering to the traditional belief that ever-greater military power is the key to American security and influence in the world, sees need for more sophisticated submarines, bombers and nuclear warheads. Sen. McGovern believes that, broadly speaking, the arsenal is already well enough stocked and that social divisions at home are more dangerous to national security than any present threat abroad. His strategists argue that $10 billion or more can be diverted from the defense budget yearly without diminishing effective military strength.

The divergence in these concepts is basic, far too much so to be conveyed by polemics about white flags of surrender or by mowing down toy soldiers on a television screen. Even a cursory reading of the McGovern defense program would confirm that he, no less than Mr. Nixon, understands the absolute necessity of maintaining military strength sufficient to meet any conceivable armed threat. That basic fact of national interest is not at issue. The point at issue is: How much military power? What constitutes national security?

We believe that the Nixon administration, in its preoccupation with military might, has grievously misjudged America's national security needs in the 1970s. Not only that; the weapons buildup envisaged by this administration would be wasteful of resources and inherently self-defeating. It would actually detract from American security by heightening suspicions and triggering countermeasures by the Soviet Union.

Current programs for new weapons systems would require a defense budget of more than $100 billion four years from now. The money spent for just one of the proposed B-1 bombers—$50 million—could provide decent housing for 1,500 poor and middle-income families for 30 years. Each of the projected Trident submarines will cost $1 billion; for that sum a major American city could build a new mass transportation system.

If it could be shown that national security depended on these weapons, there would be no argument. The cost would have to be met. But strategic calculation, as well as common sense, argues against committing the Navy now to the expensive Trident when a modernized force of Polaris-Posidon submarines would be invulnerable to any threat now present or foreseen in existing technology. Similarly, it is hard to see how the B-1 bomber or ABM defense for the Grand Forks ICBM site would make this country any safer, given the effectiveness of the primary submarine deterrent.

President Nixon's decision to develop a second generation of more accurate MIRV multiple warheads, far ahead of Soviet capabilities, is disturbing on more ominous grounds. Quietly, perhaps even unwittingly, hideously lethal nuclear weapons are being made pragmatic. "Promoted" beyond psychological and political service as deterrents, they are graduating into the category of perfectly reasonable national means to be used in pursuit of any future foreign policy goals. This does not bring national security, it carries the seeds of global disaster.

The Nixon administration argues that spectacular weapons development will constitute a useful bargaining chip in future arms control negotiations with the Soviet Union. Sen. McGovern's experts agree emphatically that research must be continued to assure that the United States remains in front of global military technology. But bargaining power derives from the American potential to deploy advanced weapons, not their actual deployment at immense cost long before they could be needed.

America's defense budget is exploding, becoming in itself a threat to the security and well-being of the nation. The Nixon administration seems insensitive to this danger—indeed, is promoting it. Sen. McGovern has shown the sense to spot the threat, and the courage to confront it.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Nixon and the Labor Vote

By Philip Shabecoff

WASHINGTON.—I was elected to smash the labor bosses.—Rep. Richard M. Nixon, quoted in an interview on his first day in Congress, Jan. 3, 1947.

There will be no anti-labor plank in this platform.—President Richard M. Nixon's instructions to the Republican platform committee, August, 1972, as quoted by an administration aide.

Nixon, who has been considered an adversary of organized labor for much of his long political career, has now won substantial labor support in his bid for reelection as President. How did he do it?

It was during the turmoil surrounding the U.S. invasion of Cambodia early in 1970 that the President decided he could split a significant portion of the labor vote away from the Democratic party, according to labor sources.

Courting Votes

In the intervening two and one-half years, the President and his campaign aides have energetically and systematically courted these labor votes.

A well-placed administration source recalled the events during the Cambodian crisis that led to the President's decision:

"We were sitting around the White House feeling that the country was collapsing around us. Thousands of kids were marching in Washington, and that Kent State thing happened."

"Then we heard that 100,000 hard hats were marching on Wall Street in New York in support of the President. It had an electrifying effect on everybody, including the President. It struck him that those workers had the same feeling about the country he did."

It now appears that Nixon has been more successful in courting the political support of organized labor than any Republican presidential candidate in recent history.

He has been endorsed by unions or the leaders of unions representing about 5 million workers, according to the Committee for the Re-Election of the President. Campaign aides expect that Nixon will receive double the 25 to 35 percent of the blue collar vote he received in his race against Hubert H. Humphrey in 1968.

Narrow Support

His formal support from labor is admittedly narrow so far. It comes chiefly—although not exclusively—from the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, the construction unions and the maritime trades. These are unions on the relatively affluent and conservative end of the labor spectrum.

Sen. George McGovern has been endorsed by even more unions, with a total membership of over 8 million workers. Unions that have endorsed the Democratic ticket, moreover, are those traditionally active in national politics.

But as one Democratic campaign official noted grimly, the Democratic party must have solid labor support to win even in the close elections. "We haven't lost all that much of labor, but what we've lost is enough to fix our clock," the official said.

The reasons for Nixon's success with organized labor are many and complex. Some will emerge only in the future. But as Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson pointed out in a recent interview, Nixon "kept the door open" for labor even when he was being vilified as "labor's number one enemy" by the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, and others.

Thus the President and his political strategists set about "peeling off," as one disgruntled Democratic party official put it, that segment of the trade union movement that could be lured from the traditional allegiance to the Democratic party.

Many of the unions that have endorsed the President thus far have received governmental favors, concessions or preferences of some sort.

Although the administration protests that it was coincidence, it is noteworthy that the teamsters' endorsement of the President and the White House decision to drop plans for anti-strike legislation in the transportation industry occurred within a few days of each other.

Wage increases due under the teamsters' master freight contract were approved by the Pay Board although there was a question—resolved by "technical" procedures—about whether they conformed to the board's rules.

Frank E. Fitzsimmons, president of the teamsters, remained on the board when the other labor members quit last March.

Although there has been some speculation that the administration let James D. Hoffa, former teamster president out of prison in return for a union endorsement for the President, administration sources make a persuasive case that this was not so.

The construction unions have also been the beneficiary of some special treatment by the administration. The construction industry has been given a separate wage control board, and construction wage increases, while reduced, are still running ahead of wage increases going to workers in the rest of the economy.

Funds Unfrozen

Recently, substantial federal funds for construction projects were unfrozen and pumped into the economy, creating additional jobs for construction workers.

The construction unions have made no secret of the fact that they are pleased with the administration's modification of the Philadelphia Plan, which originally was designed to increase the number of minority workers in the building trades.

Nixon's strong support among the maritime trades, including an endorsement by the International Longshoremen's Assn., reflects the administration's support for legislation to help rebuild the Merchant Marine.

The president of the American Federation of Government Employees, John P. Gynor, personally endorsed Nixon after the administration approved wage concessions for federal blue collar workers. Gynor made his endorsement despite objections from members of the union.

Both Republican and Democratic campaign officials concede that the decision by George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, to remain neutral was crucial to the President's ability to win labor support.

"I would rather have had Meany's neutrality than the endorsement of all construction trades and the teamsters combined," one administration official said. "It's not so much what he brought us as what he denied the opposition."

The wooing of the labor vote is directed by Charles W. Colson, special counsel to the President. Donald P. Rodgers, who comes from the building trades in New York City, was installed in the White House as consultant to the President for labor under Colson, a job that will be permanent if Nixon is re-elected.

Bernard E. Delury, assistant industrial commissioner of New York State, the son of the head of the New York sanitation workers union, was named executive director of labor affairs of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President.

At Democratic national headquarters one melancholy campaign official summed up the President's technique in seeking labor support:

"Nixon gnaws around the edges of a worker's life. He hasn't touched the central trade union part. But he gnaws a little at the Catholic part; a little at the Polish part; a little at the patriotic part; and a little at the anti-hippie part."

"After a while, he has an awful lot of that worker."

Cowardice and Courage

By Anthony Lewis

NEW YORK.—The destruction of the French diplomatic mission in Hanoi is one of those rare events that illuminate our condition. If we Americans look, we can see what has become of us in the Vietnam war. We can see what sort of men lead us.

To bomb Hanoi at all at such a critical time in the peace talks came close to the irrational. Nor could it be dismissed as a policy oversight. Twice before American bombing has disrupted attempts to negotiate a settlement. We have to conclude that the bombing has taken on a life of its own: a brutality that feeds itself.

But the folly of the bombing in terms of policy was not the worst of it. There was the reaction of those who make the policy.

No Responsibility

Not one person in the Saigon command or the Pentagon was man enough to say that this country accepted responsibility for the death and destruction in the French Mission. Instead the American public saw on television the obscene spectacle of Melvin R. Laird, the secretary of defense, trying to find someone or something else to blame.

The French Mission might have been hit by anti-aircraft missiles, the Defense Department suggested. As if that would make any difference in our responsibility! The North Vietnamese are not yet forbidden to defend their own capital, though the American military sometimes talk as if there ought to be a law to that effect. Those who bomb are responsible for all the consequences.

In this case it happens that a

Canadian correspondent, Michael Maclear, saw the bombing attack: repeated sorties by American planes "over the center of the capital," he wrote, an area with embassies but "no North Vietnamese ministries or factories anywhere near." And so we know that this war has not only brutalized American policy, it has left us with leaders who lack the candor and the courage to admit it when we have gone wrong.

But even that was not the worst in the episode of the French Mission.

This bombing led the national television news and made the headlines. But the death and destruction were really pretty small stuff by the standards of what American planes have done. Western correspondents visiting North Vietnam have seen villages pulverized by B-52s, hospitals and schools hit, acres of housing smashed. On one day last April in one city, Haiphong, hundreds and probably thousands of Vietnamese were killed by American bombers.

Why did we pay more attention to the incident of the French Mission? Could it be that skin color makes a difference? Would our pilots worry a little more if the people they bombed day after day and year after year were Europeans instead of Asians? Would successive Presidents have found it politically possible to carry on a war of mass destruction against a small European country for seven years? The questions are not for Washington officials alone but for all of us.

The bombing in Hanoi occurred a few hours after George McGovern spoke to the American people on the issue of Vietnam, and it dramatized his central argument: that this war, conducted by brutal means for an ignoble cause, is corrupting America as surely as it is destroying Indochina.

Some people concerned about the war and issues of freedom at home have been disappointed in the McGovern campaign. I am among them. It is therefore important, and only just, to say that the television talk on Vietnam was the most courageous political speech delivered in this country in a long time.

McGovern could have the hard questions. He or, for example, have said that a. He would go on to say military aid to Nguyen Van in Saigon after withdrawal American forces. That have been an earlier. He said right. He believes and what many I can have bitterly learned in name: Thieu is a tyrant. He survived only by American ing and who does not deserve support for one more day.

Some commentators who's this war for what it has done America nevertheless the McGovern speech. It was one-sided, they said, too it should have covered this tiling point or that. To criticism seems estranged miscecuited.

More Bombing

Four years ago this count a presidential candidate who he would end the war. He was Nixon, and the people loved him. It turned out his pledge had some about American "honor" at survival of Thieu. The res been four more years of w tenified war, the greatest hardiment in the history of earth.

George McGovern made in his speech that he is no kind of candidate, and not that kind of President. purpose was to leave no left none. It is strange for who deplore the war to q with some particular aspect speech when the alternat this election is the man who been bombing these last years.

The speech could help Govern in his uphill race affirming the faith of his porters. In any case, honor him for it as it has ed Adlai Stevenson for pro a ban on nuclear testing that was politically risky. I ever happened in the Paris Vietnam will some day be troled by its own nation forces. The only question I long we try to fight that it and how much more blood shed.

Congress and the Spending Ceiling

The House of Representatives is a legislative body composed of people who complain 364 days a year about the erosion of congressional power. And then, on the 365th day, they vote by a large majority to give the President the remnants of their control over spending.

Congress and the President are now engaged in an elaborate game in which the loser holds the bag for the coming tax increase. On Saturday, the President said, "A vote against the spending ceiling could prove to be a vote for higher taxes." On Tuesday, the House collapsed in fright and passed, 221 to 163, legislation inviting the President to cut anywhere and anything to bring spending down to $250 billion this year. This bill constitutes a retroactive item veto, for it authorizes Mr. Nixon to void benefits that Congress has already enacted and to cancel programs already in operation.

Fortunately, the bill has not yet come before the Senate. It is still possible to hope that the majority there will reject Congressman Mills's view that the Democrats ought now to sign away Congress's constitutional responsibilities in order to preserve their majorities and their committee chairmanships.

"I consider the battle against higher prices and higher taxes to be the major domestic issue of this presidential campaign," Mr. Nixon said last weekend. "The issue is clear. I am holding spending at a range not requiring a tax increase now or over the next four years." The casual reader would hardly guess that Mr. Nixon's budget for the current year is running some $35 billion in deficit. Mr. Nixon keeps complaining that Congress has run wild but, in fact, the current Congress is a rather tame and docile one.

Far from running wild, it has passed only one bill over Mr. Nixon's veto this year, an expansion of railroad retirement benefits that added less than half a billion dollars to that deficit. Everything else in the $35 billion was either contained in Mr. Nixon's original budget, or it has been added by legislation that Mr. Nixon signed. The real causes of the deficit are, of course, two large tax cuts within the past three years, a recession from which the country is only slowly recovering, and continuously high unemployment.

The spending ceiling bill is not merely a symbolic gesture in an election campaign. The Senate has a duty to look beyond Nov. 7 and assess the damage that it would inflict if it were actually passed and enforced. It would mean, in the first half of 1973, budget cuts amounting to perhaps one-third of the federal spending in the category that includes housing, urban development, pollution control, public transportation and education. For the following year, Mr. Nixon's current promises would require still deeper cuts because many federal programs, including those that cannot be touched for imperative legal or political reasons, have a substantial rate of growth built into them.

Budget cuts on this scale obviously mean a higher unemployment rate. More broadly, they mean a dramatic shrinkage of Americans' sense of common interest in the society in which we all live. "My fellow Americans," the President said, "this government does not need any more of your income and it should not be allowed to take any more of your salary and your wages in taxes." What the government needs to balance its budget depends entirely upon the way it defines its responsibilities. If Mr. Nixon slashes back the established federal responsibilities in our country, then no doubt his administration can get along with lower revenues. The question is whether a low income tax rate constitutes the most important of this nation's social values.

Bonn-Peking Rapprochement

Among major European powers in their diplomatic race toward Peking, West Germany has been preceded by Britain, Italy and France. But it achieved a first, of all divided countries beset with internal political rivalry, in mending relations with the Soviet Union and Communist China.

Thus, Brandt gave a fresh dimension to his Ostpolitik by demonstrating that the original policy of reconciliation with the Soviet bloc could extend beyond the European border. . . . On the heels of establishing relations with Japan, Peking has gained a new vantage point in its bid for entry into the West European scene.

LONDON.—Pulpits from which John Wesley preached are favorite objects of antiquarian interest in many parts of the country. One of the most curious now stands, surrounded by a rail, in front of a Wesleyan chapel at Wednesday. It consists of a horse-block, from which the founder of Methodism preached no less than 46 sermons. In his time it stood by the side of a building in one of the open spaces of that town.

K. Recalls ts Envoy o Uganda ay Reconsider ies With Kampala

LONDON, Oct. 13 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home today ordered the immediate recall of Britain's envoy to Uganda.

At the same time, the Foreign Office issued a statement saying that the question of diplomatic representation in the two countries was under review. The statement hinted strongly that Uganda's high commissioner here, Col. M. Lukwima, may be asked to leave Britain.

The British action followed yesterday's demand by Uganda's president, Idi Amin, that Britain's high commissioner in Uganda, David Slater, leave the country by Nov. 8. Gen. Amin accused Slater of responsibility for "unfounded" British press reports of a coup in Uganda.

Deteriorating Relations

Gen. Amin's demand was the latest move in the deteriorating relations between the two countries which began two months ago when Gen. Amin ordered the expulsion of Nov. 8 of thousands of British citizens and British passport holders. The Foreign Office, which cited any wrongdoing by Mr. Slater, said that the envoy would leave Uganda in the next few days.

Although the Foreign Office urged a possible expulsion of the Uganda high commissioner, the British are believed to be taking this step. There are still some 7,000 British subjects working in Uganda and London is anxious to ensure their safety. The reference in the statement to a review of the situation in Uganda as a whole, was believed to take this factor into account.

Yugoslav Held After Hijacking Plane to Zurich

ZURICH, Oct. 13 (Reuters).—A Yugoslav, about 50, was in custody here tonight after threatening to blow up a Swissair jetliner in which he had flown from Stuttgart locked in the pilot's seat.

Police would not reveal his name, but said that he appeared to be mentally disturbed. He had said that he did not belong to any political organization.

Soon after the plane left Stuttgart, the Yugoslav gave an air hostess five pieces of paper containing an appeal to world opinion written in English. He asked her to take them to the captain, and said he had a bomb on board.

He then barricaded himself in the toilet, and stayed there until he airlifted arrived in Zurich. The 70 other passengers and crew members hurried out of the DC-9 jet as soon as the plane landed here.

A few minutes later, police surrounded the man to come out of the toilet in the rear of the plane and give himself up.

A search of the plane and of the man's hand luggage revealed no bomb, though batteries and wires were found in his briefcase, a Zurich police spokesman said.

Russia Wins Chess Olympiad; Hungary 2d, Yugoslavia 3d

SKOPLJE, Yugoslavia, Oct. 13 (UPI).—The Soviet Union overcame a challenge from Hungary today and won the 20th Chess Olympiad—a victory which Soviet players said redeemed Russian chess from Boris Spassky's world championship title loss last month.

"This is to show the world that everything is still all right in Soviet chess," said a grinning former world champion, Mikhail Tal of the Soviet Union, raising a glass of vodka in celebration.

Tal's draw in adjourned 18th-round play against Romania's Theodor Ghițescu clinched the Soviet Union's 11th gold medal in as many Olympiads, and protected them against a last-moment threat from the young Hungarian team.

When Tal, a 36-year-old native of Latvia, learned of Hungary's 2-2 final-round tie against West Germany—not enough to beat the Russian overall point total—he threw his arms around Theodor Ghițescu and Vasily Smyslov, two other world champions who led the Russians through the 25-day, 63-nation tournament.

Russians Beat Romanians

The Russians' 3-1 defeat of Romania in the last round gave them 42 points and an undisputed first-place finish in the race among 18 qualifying teams for three Olympic medals.

Hungary lost its chances for the gold when Tal, soft-spoken Istvan Csom, 32, resigned at the last possible moment to Jürgen Dübaut of West Germany.

Yugoslavia secured a third-place bronze medal behind Hungary by edging Sweden 2.5-1.5 in the last round. Czechoslovakia, West Germany, Bulgaria, and Romania followed respectively in the standings.

"Naturally, we were all disappointed when Spassky lost at Reykjavik to Bobby Fischer," Tal said. "But we came here to show that Fischer beat only one player."

U.S. Backs Japan Bid For UN Council Seat

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 13 (AP).—American Ambassador George Bush says that the United States supports Japan in its bid for a permanent UN Security Council seat but envisages "great complexities" in the path.

He told a news conference Wednesday he could make no predictions when Japan might win the seat. He added that the Japanese "will be carrying the ball on this."

Two Yemens Said to Agree To Cease-Fire

Arab League Unit Arranged Truce

ADEN, Oct. 13 (Reuters).—The two Yemens have agreed to a cease-fire and to withdraw their forces 10 kilometers inside their respective borders, an Arab League mediating mission announced today.

The mission has been working to end the border clashes between the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen (South) and the Yemen Arab Republic (North), which flared up Sept. 26.

It returned here yesterday after a five-day visit to North Yemen and was understood to have presented its peace proposals to a South Yemeni ministerial committee last night.

The mission, under the chairmanship of Salim al-Yafi, assistant secretary-general of the league, is made up of representatives of Algeria, Syria, Kuwait and Egypt.

Libyan Withdrawal

A Libyan representative withdrew from the mission while it was visiting North Yemen.

The mission said in its statement today that both sides had agreed to stop their propaganda campaigns immediately and to prevent any military concentrations which might lead to renewed clashes.

Both Yemens also agreed to send delegations to a meeting at the headquarters of the Arab League in Cairo Oct. 31, to discuss the outstanding issues dividing the two countries.

The delegations will also seek ways to achieve "real unity" between the Yemens. Any such proposals would then be submitted to a summit conference whose date and site will be decided later.

Italian Schools Are Closed By 2-Day Teachers' Strike

By Paul Hofmann

ROME, Oct. 13 (NYT).—Italy's education system from the elementary level to the universities was paralyzed today as teachers started a two-day strike to protest against what their unions termed the "shameful" condition of the schools.

The walkout was not primarily over salary issues, but aimed at dramatizing the glaring shortcomings of a school system in which one out of every three students has no seat in a classroom and where fully two thirds of all secondary-level teachers had never any job training.

A shortage of qualified teachers for the rapidly growing student population has during the last few years led to the enrollment of pharmacists, veterinarians, lawyers, hand surgeons and sundry college graduates into the teaching profession, although they lack any educational experience.

At present, special evening and weekend courses are being held in all major Italian cities to give some pedagogic background to the makeshift personnel teaching in classrooms during the day. The ill-defined service staffs in this auxiliary teaching force are one of the issues in the current agitation.

Another major grievance is the desperate lack of classrooms and school equipment throughout the country. Italy's inert bureaucracy is under indictment for having proved unable during the last several years to spend huge funds for school construction that Parliament had long appropriated.

The teachers also protest against antiquated curricula and rules. According to a top education official and longtime adviser to the government, Giovanni Gonzer, curricula in Italian schools are "the most backward in all Europe."

Today's strike came less than two weeks after the schools reopened at the end of Italy's three-month summer vacations, which are among Europe's longest. Many students still don't know today to which classrooms they will be assigned, whether they are to attend morning, afternoon or evening classes, and who their teachers are.

Barring further strikes or student protests, a semblance of regular class work is not expected to start before next month in many schools.

New Strike at Rome Airport

ROME, Oct. 13 (Reuters).—Ground staff at Rome's Fiumicino Airport today staged another unofficial strike to protest against lack of progress in negotiations for a new labor contract.

Today's strike affected drivers of buses taking passengers to and from planes and of tractors which pull landing ramps into place. Airline staff were having to push the steps up to the planes while passengers walked across the acres of windy tarmac.

Angela Davis Back in U.S. After Tour of Red Bloc

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (NYT).—Angela Davis, the black militant college teacher who was acquitted of murder and other charges earlier this year, returned to the United States last night after a six-week tour of the Soviet Union and other Communist countries.

Miss Davis said on her arrival at Kennedy International Airport here from Santiago, Chile, that she intended to spend the time between now and Election Day campaigning for candidates for public office endorsed by the Communist party, of which she is a member.

Miss Davis said she wants to resume teaching philosophy at the University of California at Los Angeles, from whose faculty she was dropped in 1970. The philosophy department has asked that she be rehired, and the issue is now before the university regents.

On her trip to the Soviet Union, East Germany, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Cuba and Chile, she was accompanied by Franklin and Kendra Alexander, who raised money for her defense effort at her trial in California.

At the airport last night, where her last-minute flight was met by 50 friends and sympathizers in a quiet welcome, Miss Davis said that her visits to Communist countries have been "indispensable to me, because they supplemented my theoretical knowledge of socialism with some concrete knowledge."

Judge Edward McLean; Defended Alger Hiss

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (NYT).—Federal Judge Edward C. McLean, 68, died yesterday, apparently of a heart attack, after collapsing at the entrance to the United States Court House.

Judge McLean was attorney of record for Alger Hiss, a former State Department official, in the perjury trials in 1949-50. They had been classmates at Harvard law school.

In 1962 Mr. McLean, a Republican, was appointed by President John F. Kennedy to the Southern District Court of New York.

This year Judge McLean was one of a panel of three judges who declared unconstitutional a law providing $33 million in New York State funds to aid parochial schools.

Capt. Albert R. Francis

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (NYT).—Albert R. Francis, 83, former master of the cruise liner Monarch of Bermuda and a hero of the Morro Castle disaster in 1934, died Wednesday at his home in Tucker's Town, Bermuda.

Capt. Francis had had a long and varied career as a master mariner. Perhaps the highlight of his adventures was the dramatic rescue of 78 passengers from the Morro Castle, burning off Ashbury Park, N.J., on Sept. 8, 1934.

The Monarch of Bermuda was 20 miles from the Morro Castle when word was flashed of the fire on board.

Capt. Francis reached the stricken cruise liner in an hour, launched five lifeboats, maneuvered to within 60 feet of the burning vessel, and set up a lee to protect the bobbing lifeboats.

Dr. Paul Friedman

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (NYT).—Dr. Paul Friedman, 73, a psychiatrist and an expert on suicidal tendencies, died of a heart attack yesterday at Mt. Sinai Hospital.

Dr. Friedman was associate clinical professor emeritus of psychiatry at Mt. Sinai and professor of psychiatry at its medical school. He also was a member of the faculty of the Jewish Theological Seminary.

He became interested in the subject of suicide in 1934, a year after he was graduated from Bern University in Switzerland with a degree in medicine.

He became associated with the Institute of Forensic Medicine and was attached to the Bern police department to get first-hand information on suicides.

He later wrote his findings in a monograph published in Paris called "Les Suicides."

VIENNA, Oct. 13 (Reuters).—A. T. Nielsen, 57, of Denmark, the representative in Austria of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, died here Wednesday, a spokesman of the high commissioner's office here said.

Mr. Nielsen was attending an international conference in Vienna when he collapsed.

He had worked for 27 years in various UN refugee relief organizations, serving in Korea, the Middle East, Zambia, Uganda and Europe.

Vasily S. Pustovoyt

MOSCOW, Oct. 13 (AP).—The Soviet agricultural scientist Vasily S. Pustovoyt, 88, noted for his development of the sunflower as a major oil crop in the Soviet Union, died Wednesday, Tass announced.

All major Soviet papers today carried an obituary of the scientist, who died at the Krasnodar Institute of Oil Crops, which he founded in 1932.

The obituary was signed by the top Soviet leaders.

Mr. Pustovoyt spent most of his life in the north Caucasus region. In addition to his development of sunflowers with high oil content, he also developed wheat and other seed grains for growing in the region.

2 Britons Freed By Red China

HONG KONG, Oct. 13 (AP).—Two British subjects are being released from detention by Communist China and are being deported to Hong Kong, a Hong Kong government spokesman said tonight.

He named the two as Percival and Frederick Farmer and said officials here had been told they had been detained in China since September 1967. British officials had not known of their detention.

Sketchy information received here from Peking indicated the two have a sister, Dorothy, who also has been in China but was not detained. The spokesman said he did not have ages for the two men but the sister was believed to be 52.

Education Minister Oscar Scalfaro

ROME, Oct. 13 (Reuters).—Education Minister Oscar Scalfaro told the Chamber of Deputies today that the government was working to speed up the school construction earlier this week that efforts to overcome the present crisis in the education system "will be neither easy nor short."

Mr. Scalfaro, a conservative Roman Catholic, deplored what he described as lack of discipline, violence, and harmful injection of politics into school. He also alleged that "not all teachers are worthy, capable and competent."

The education minister noted that schools all over the world were in a turmoil and observed that teachers could not do the job that parents and the family were supposed to do.

United Nations, N.Y., Oct. 13 (AP).—Secretary of State William F. Rogers ended three weeks of talks with ministers from 71 countries yesterday and said, "The prestige of the United States is as high as it has ever been."

Mr. Rogers said the talks covered "literally all the major problems of the world."

In contrast with anti-American statements made in public debates in the UN, the private discussions held in his hotel suite were "very reasonable, with almost no exceptions," he said.

There are "certain things that have to be said for political purposes domestically" in the UN debates, Mr. Rogers said.

"It is interesting to contrast the discussions we have had here with what is said in the public forum," he said.

In some cases, he said, the contrast was "quite laughable."

He said that as a result of his meetings, the chances of UN passage of a treaty against terrorism are "considerably improved."

Russia Asks UN To Curb Satellite TV Broadcasting

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 13 (WP).—The Soviet Union yesterday proposed a global ban on unrestricted use of space satellites for direct television broadcasting, a proposal that the United States called a threat to freedom of information.

Soviet delegate Jacob Malik told the Main Political Committee that such restrictions are needed to keep satellite broadcasts from igniting international conflicts.

He submitted a draft resolution which would authorize a legal subcommittee to draw up an international convention governing the use of satellites.

"A nation should be able to protect its people from direct satellite broadcasting of matters such as eroticism, violence, murder and crime," Mr. Malik said.

U.S. delegate George Bush, speaking first as the committee opened debate on peaceful uses of outer space, said that the United States is concerned over limiting "what promises in due course to become an important new means of making information widely and immediately available to the people of the world."

He pointed out that direct broadcasts from satellites to home receivers are still not feasible and that current U.S. experiments in Canada and India apply only to community receivers for local rebroadcast.

Fortunate Depero, Work from 1913-1948. Pictogramma, 45 Corso del Rinascimento, Rome, until Nov. 10.

Depero, lively and always inspired, was a one-man art movement. He was associated with the futurists but less earnest and political than they. He too wanted to put art into everyday life and designed fabrics, clothes, furniture and theater sets in bright, amusing colors and shapes. Depero lived from 1892 until 1960, his humor and appetite remaining with him to the end of his active, 50-year career. He was more interested in fresh, whimsical ideas in any medium than the possibilities of form within a picture. Sculpture alone imposed a limit by its nature, and his wooden statues are his best expression. They are wonderful, both sophisticated and close to folk art. This selection includes his simple, curvy "Heart Eaters," painted green and black, and the replica of his big, funny "Savage," the original of which housed a tiny puppet theater in its stomach. Other works in this show are a tapestry, "Butterfly Dancer" of 1920, and a watercolor portrait of the collector Clavel, both in glowing colors. There are drawings of costumes for Stravinsky's "Chant du Rossignol" and an oil of three silver spacemen inside a silver capsule, painted in 1922, is quite visionary. Another, "City Mechanized by Its Own Shadows" is like a haunting modern fairy tale. Though Depero's works are stamped by the taste of the twenties, they are always witty and positive. This selection of 70 pieces is a welcome occasion to re-evaluate a long neglected artist.

Astronomer, Composer Named

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (UPI).—The National Academy of Sciences has announced that it has commissioned an American composer and a British astronomer to write a musical work celebrating the 500th anniversary of the birth of Nicolaus Copernicus.

... The authors will be Leo Smith, composer in residence at the American Academy in Rome, and Dr. Fred Hoyle, the astronomer. The two have collaborated before in concerts designed to relate music and science. Their new work will be performed for the first time during the academy's annual meeting next April. It will involve singers, a narrator and five or six instrumentalists.

Auction Prices for Japanese Prints Soar

By Souren Melikian

NEW YORK (UPI).—A new era in the market for Japanese prints opened early this month when the Hans Popper collection came up for sale at Sotheby Parke-Bernet, New York.

Prices have tripled. And the Japanese are now spending their undervalued yen to buy works of a type they once despised. They now quite obviously have the kind of buying power that was once thought to be the exclusive preserve of rich Americans.

The Popper sale will remain as one of the significant events of the 1972-73 auction season. Although there were only 312 prints, the quality was high, particularly high when it came to work by the so-called primitives of the 17th and 18th centuries.

Although his tastes were eclectic, the late Hans Popper was particularly interested in 18th and 19th-century European painting. In a way, he retraced in his collection the aesthetic itinerary of the painters he admired. He had, for example, 30 prints by Utamaro, who worked in the last quarter of the 18th century and the beginning of the 19th century. Utamaro had strong appeal for Popper and Toulouse-Lautrec, among others—perhaps because of his boldly outlined areas of flat color and his special way of focusing on his subject, which is not unlike the close-ups of modern photography. Kokosai, Sharaku, Hiroshige, also much admired in the 19th century, were the other high points of the Popper collection.

Primitives

In addition to works by these artists, Mr. Popper collected the primitives, an almost ignored category. Cultured by Western art historians, the term, in this case, refers to the first engravers whose works were printed in black and white from wood blocks and then colored by hand. Eventually Popper built up such a collection that the Japanese asked for 71 of his prints for the exhibition of "Dixie-e Masterpieces in Foreign Collections" in Tokyo last year. This, in itself, was a commercial asset at the Oct. 5-6 auction. The auction catalogue was written by J. Hillier, one of the best known specialists in the field.

Strangely enough, buyers did not respond immediately so that a few bargains were to be had at the beginning of the sale. For example, a beautiful portrait of a courtesan with strong black outlines retaining the full vigor of pen and brush drawings in the Chinese tradition made only $1,000. Next came an even more desirable print by Kiyomasa II, dated 1787, in three colors: brick red, an acid, mustardy yellow and grayish green. This was knocked down at $1,800.

But this low-keyed mood did not last. An American collector from Minnesota bought Lot 20, a print exhibited in Japan in 1971, for $6,750. By the time the works of Okumura Toshiro, a primitive active in the first quarter of the 18th century, came up, international collectors were bidding hard. A magnificent print showing two actresses playing the part of courtesans was cheap at $2,000; a Paris collector got it. But Lot 27, a well-known print of a young woman taming a long-handled kite, illustrated in two important books and exhibited in Tokyo in 1964 and 1971, was bought by a Kentucky collector for $3,000. A few minutes later, the buyer again acquired one of the finest primitives in the sale, the portrait of a young woman by Kiyomasa, for $4,000.

By then the pace was set. The first 18th-century classical master represented in the sale was Suzuki Harunobu. The first Harunobu, exhibited in Tokyo in 1964 and in Philadelphia in 1970, sold for $2,500, a fantastic price. The next Harunobu, a very good print, went for $4,000 to a New York collector.

Tables Turned

On the first day of the auction, the Americans were outside the foreigners. The next day, the tables were turned as we by Kiyomasa Utamaro and Toshiro Sharaku, the most admired masters of the 18th-century Japanese print, came up for sale.

A London dealer bidding for an unnamed Japanese collector paid a world record price for a print by Utamaro: $37,500. The print was a half-length portrait, one of the two best pieces of the Utamaro series. The other went to a Swiss collector for a less-than $3,000. It was in poor condition, soiled and part overprinted.

Competing for the Utamaro were a Japanese dealer, the Kyu dealer acting for the unnamed Japanese collector, a San Francisco dealer and a few non-Americans.

When the Sharakus came up, they all went to the Los Angeles dealer bidding for his Japanese client. The prices: $11,000, $14,000 and $17,000. The latter is the world record price for a Sharaku print.

Clearly, a new era in the market for Japanese prints began. Prices have multiplied overnight. For example, at the famous print of a great wave by Hokusai sold for $12,500 in 1964, also at Parke-Bernet, another print from same block sold for $4,000. The $17,000 Sharaku was in a poor condition, with the ink background creased and rubbed several "minor repairs," as the catalogue tactfully put it. In none of the Sharakus was in perfect condition, which makes prices all the more remarkable.

Secondly, it is clear that the Japanese have stepped into the field that they have for so long neglected. They have the money to spend.

Entertainment in New York

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (UPI).—This is how critics rate the New Films in New York:

"Young Winston," the story of Winston Churchill's early life, got a lukewarm review in The Times. Vincent Canby: "Perhaps the one modestly remarkable feature of the film is that all three actors required to play the title role at different ages really do look alike, act like Churchill himself. The most prominent is Simoo Ward, who plays the role from the age of 17 to 27 with all the proper mannerisms. As Lord and Lady Randolph Churchill, Robert Shaw and Anne Bancroft are such interesting actors that they could have wrecked the film had it been better. You wish movie."

It were about them, not Richard Attenborough directing the movie which was written produced by Carl Foreman.

"Nathalie Granger," dir. by Marguerite Duras, who wrote the screenplay, falls please. The Times critic, Vincent Canby's opinion, the film is "a dismal follow-up Miss Duras's earlier films 'Hush' and 'Destroy.' The concerns two 'expressive' women, Jeanne Moreau and cia Bose, who share a house their two children, one of w Nathalie, apparently wants to everybody. Canby explains, while the camera 'traces the the house, Nathalie runs docile—this being a mit movie."

ART IN PARIS

Barnett Newman—
Midrash and Beyond

By Michael Gibson

ARIS, Oct. 13 (UPI)—Barnett Newman was Mark Rothko's ritual brother; they were as different as two peas in a pod. Born a couple of years apart, they died the same way (1970), had their origins in the same part of the world (Lithuania) and moved to the same part of the world (New York), and moved somewhat the same theoretical way.

Both produced very large canvases (though Newman's biggest did probably cover three of Rothko's) with big rectangular areas of a single color. It is there, in the vastness of the color, that Newman's real achievement lies. It is there, in the matter of the mind, that he is a matter of the mind. The eye and it is with a creative intention that I have seen this crude parallel between the two. Last year a retrospective of Rothko's paintings toured a number of European cities. Now we have an important body of Newman's work (25 items) on view at the Grand Palais in Paris (to Dec. 11).

Newman's paintings are somehow impressive. The scale itself is impressive in that it defies the easy mental analysis to which a smaller work might be subjected. As one stands in front of it, close to it (not too close), it slips out of one's field of vision, just as the totality of experience slips out of one's awareness—and we try to catch it in a reduced mental model. Something else too: There is one enormous midnight-blue painting ("Cathedral") in which the blue is slashed by a vertical white stripe. Now as you stand and look at it, you find it almost impossible to keep the blue from flowing over most of the white, erasing it. You can neither fully grasp the painting, nor make it hold still.

Newman is an important artist, yet he is one whose work one must talk about for a while in order to grasp its importance. This is a common fact of civilization and certainly a shortcoming in my view on the purely artistic level. And it is also a hard one to recognize when it occurs in an artist who has made a major contribution to his age. Too many people admire him and feel a debt to him, and his work comes to symbolize the deep and intangible value of what he has brought to them.

Newman belongs to that breed of artists whose work becomes a dialectical turning point that helps others turn to a new perspective. In this respect he is rather in the position of someone like Delacroix.

His treatment of color and his simple geometric arrangement of space has invited comparisons with Mondrian, although he is poles apart from him. Newman's basic concern is metaphysical. There is a willful quest of the sublime, expressed both in his theoretical writing and in aspects and titles of his paintings. What this actually implies is hard to define precisely, although some of his theoretical writing is quoted in the excellent book on Newman by Thomas B. Hess, reproduced in full in the catalogue of the Paris show, and gives a good idea of the breadth of his theoretical outlook. According to Hess, Newman's "sublime" is more closely related to an artist's motives than to a way of painting or the appearance of a work of art.

Nonetheless the motives obviously affect the appearance of the work and this is quite naturally the case with Newman's own production. A concern with the "sublime" as such implies a desire to communicate and possibly to elevate. More is not so much concerned with sublimity as with the size of a 5 by 5 canvas.

Paris, France, Galerie Mony Calatchi, 182 Boulevard Saint-Germain, Paris 6, to Nov. 6.

A collection of sculptures in marble done over the past three years. Simple, rounded, highly polished forms, in marble of various colors, that call to mind the type of stylization associated with the Brancusi.

Agnes, Musée National d'Art Moderne, 12 Avenue du Président Wilson, Paris 16, to Dec. 4. Israeli artist Yaacov Agam's work is concerned with movement, either that of the work itself or that of the spectator. His paintings change color and design as you walk past them, his sculptures, shiny tubular forms, can be moved about. One piece "Fou-Bau" is a jet of water with an apparently inexplicable flame at the top of it. It works on a schedule between 3 and 5 p.m. until next Monday. Attractive and entertaining! M. G.

with a presence as he stands on Sinai. But Aaron who is his spokesman is bound to give the masses a very elevated idea of Moses, and of the reality he deals with.

Newman/Aaron
Newman is rather in the position of Aaron saying "something is sublime," sweeping away the banality and pettiness of former statements and leaving an impression of personal emptiness in their stead. But the impersonality one encounters does not strike one at all in the same way as the kind one finds in Paulhan's art. Such a style is formal, aesthetic and has no place in it for a presence. Newman's art, on the other hand, seems to call for a presence, or even for a vision of solitude. But ultimately, rather than a vision it provides a statement or a symbol, a support for the sort of ingenious metaphysical commentary known in the Jewish tradition as midrash.

Paris Autumn Festival Offers Vast
Program of Music, Dance and Art

PARIS, Oct. 13 (UPI)—The latest addition to the long and growing list of arts festivals—the Paris Autumn Festival—gets under way next week the start of a vast program, devoted mainly to contemporary art, that will run to Nov. 19.

Although the festival brings under one roof several established autumn events, such as the International Dance Festival and the Semaine Musicale Internationale de Paris, the festival administration itself is playing an important catalytic role. Under Michel Guy, the director general, it is organizing productions that pull together different artistic disciplines and pool the resources of different ensembles.

The opening events were to have been today, but have been delayed by some unexpected difficulties. One is the "Polytope," the latest audio-visual creation of the composer-architect Iannis Xenakis at the Cité Museum. Mr. Xenakis said tonight it would be ready Tuesday, when some technical problems have been ironed out. At the Grand Palais, an afternoon and evening program, featuring an "environment" for children and the Multidisciplinary Experiment Group, has had to modify the plastic environment at the last minute to satisfy fire department regulations.

Wednesday brings the first performance of "Addio Garibaldi," a musical pageant by Girolamo Arrigo, in a coproduction by French Radio and Television, the Marseilles Opéra and the newly formed Opéra du Rhin.

Concerts include the Orchestre de Paris under Georg Solti in a Berg-Schoenberg program, and programs at the Paris Musée d'Art Moderne devoted to Xenakis and Dieter Schnebel. The dance program includes Merce Cunningham, the Netherlands Dance Theater and a troupe from Bali. Theater includes the Renaud-Barrault company in "Où boivent les Vaches," a new play by Roland Dubillard, and specialties by the Theatre Laboratoire of Belgium, Yvonne Rainer, Bob Wilson, and the Performance Group under Richard Schechner.

LONDON THEATER
Littlewood: Fings Ain't the Same

By John Walker

LONDON, Oct. 13 (UPI)—Joan Littlewood's Theatre Workshop production of "Costa Packet" at the Theatre Royal, Stratford E. 15, is her worst for a long time, certainly since "Twang!" that ill-fated Robin Hood musical of seven years ago that did so much to dent her reputation and that of its composer Lionel Bart.

Coincidentally, Mr. Bart is one of the contributors to the current sorry spectacle, although most of the blame for the poor songs belongs to another writer, Alan Klein.

The latest Theatre Workshop season has not been a particularly happy one. It began with a recapitulation of past successes, including an enjoyable but soft-centered revival of Brendan Behan's "The Hothouse," which was made to appear a callous gloss on the present Irish situation by some half-hearted updating. "Costa Packet" is the first new work Miss Littlewood has directed this time around, and it is not encouraging.

The subject, after a summer of tourist unrest, seemed a promising one: Cockneys on a package tour to Spain. The author, Frank Norman, claims to have drawn on actual experiences of the locals, although the result bears no sign of this, being stale clichés about lecherous travel couriers and primping gigolos.

The style represents the nadir of Miss Littlewood's approach which depends so much on creating an ensemble of players capable of improvising and improving on their material, who can sustain the discipline of apparently effortless creation. In Miss Littlewood's fun theater, actors have to project their personalities in the manner of vaudeville entertainers.

The present company, with a couple of exceptions, is not up to this task. Presented with secondhand characterizations, giggling girls aching for holiday romance, a hippy, a comic German in Lederhosen with a butch wife—they can do nothing to make them flesh and blood. Avis Burnage has a few good moments as a snobbish traveler, Maxwell Shaw shines as a shifty waiter and Valerie Walsh movingly conveys a moment of working-class angst. Otherwise, the performances are dire, the situations and the jokes unfunny. The show gives the impression of being in the first week of rehearsal.

It is not pleasant to criticize Miss Littlewood, London theater has never needed her more than now, as its arteries continue to harden. Her dream of theater is a good and vital one, of a joyous and living creation that can involve audience and actors in a spontaneous celebration. Its peak, I suppose, was reached with "Oh, What a Lovely War." The current production does dishonor to the memory of that.

Somewhat defensively, Miss Littlewood labels "Costa Packet" "a candy floss entertainment," but it is far more insubstantial than that suggests. On a basic level, as a good old knees-up (a sort of Cockney can-can), it fails. Frank Norman, it can be remembered, was the author of one of Theatre Workshop's great hits, "Fings Ain't What They Used to Be." Fings certainly ain't.

A new thriller by Kileston Trevor, "Touch of Purple," opens at the Globe Theatre on Wednesday. It will be directed by Philip Grout. The cast includes Ray Barrett, Maxine Audley and Bernard Horsfall.

Tariff Cut Weighed

Squeeze on EEC Farm Prices
Opposed to Fight Inflation

By David Haworth

BRUSSELS, Oct. 13 (UPI)—Common external tariff on industrial products by an average rate of as much as 15 percent.

The suggestions, which are bound to cause heated political controversy in the member states, are to be discussed by the meeting of EEC finance ministers in Luxembourg at the end of this month.

French Trade
Plus Rises

PARIS, Oct. 13 (AP-DJ)—A trade surplus of 74.4 francs in September, compared with a deficit of 21 million francs in August, and a deficit of 11 million francs in September 1971, the Finance Ministry said today.

A seasonally-adjusted basis, the surplus amounted to 10.6 billion francs, compared with a deficit of 462 million francs in August and a surplus of 470 million francs in September 1971.

Exports amounted to 10.6 billion francs in September, up from 10.1 billion francs in August, and 9.4 billion francs in September 1971.

Imports amounted to 10.1 billion francs in September, up from 9.4 billion francs in August, and 9.4 billion francs in September 1971.

Card Hints Curbs
Credit Planned

PARIS, Oct. 13 (AP-DJ)—The Finance Minister Valéry Giscard d'Estaing broadly hinted that the government might curb credit growth even though growth of monetary liquidity in recent months was not responsible for the rise in prices.

Addressing the national audit commission, the minister said the recent increase in liquidity is having been the government's aim to the economy.

The future, however, the minister will take measures to moderate monetary growth, or to protect the economy from the possibility of excessive inflation, he said.

Prices Rise

PARIS, Oct. 13 (Reuters)—Wholesale price index rose 0.4 percent at the end of September from August, and 4.4 percent in September 1971, the government said today.

Greater future income can be the goal of a $5,000 portfolio
placed under management now

If the capital you have today is to grow in the future toward more income, or for education, travel, leisure, retirement, it must be kept working continually to achieve your goals.

Yet you may feel that you are actually losing ground due to inflation, taxes or lack of time for investment decisions.

To help solve this problem, clients in 64 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management. It has, we believe, proved especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios starting with from $5,000 to $50,000 — on behalf of people who recognize and can share the risks and rewards of common stock investments. The cost is modest, as low as $100 per year.

For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 15-year "performance record," and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. V-99.

IT&T Tax Caper Eased Hartford Merger

By David McClintock

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (AP-DJ)—Contrary to a popular notion, the off-delayed takeover of Hartford Fire Insurance Co. by International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. in 1970 was not a tangled ordeal in every respect.

One of the few things about the acquisition that went smoothly was a ruling by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) that the merger would be tax-free—that is, that shareholders of Hartford would not have to pay immediate capital-gains taxes on the IT&T stock they got for their interest in Hartford.

Such a tax bite could have killed the merger. But the IRS issued a favorable ruling. As it now turns out, however, there is evidence indicating IT&T resorted to a maneuver that may have wrongly gotten the company the favorable ruling. IT&T, however, says its application for the ruling was "submitted in routine fashion."

Under the tax laws, the type of merger that IT&T had contemplated with Hartford could not be considered tax free unless IT&T paid stock, and only stock, for the Hartford shares it wished to acquire.

Yet, IT&T already had acquired, for cash, some 1.7 million Hartford shares, or about 8 percent of the insurer's outstanding common stock, from various sources.

IRS Sets Conditions
Later in 1969, the IRS told IT&T that only if it disposed of the Hartford stock on conditions approved by the IRS could the merger become tax-free. The conditions were critical. According to a recently issued IRS policy statement, a company required to dispose of previously acquired shares in order to arrange a tax-free merger must sell those shares "unconditionally" to "unrelated third parties." This has been policy for at least five years, the revenue service says.

But there is a question whether IT&T's sale of its Hartford shares was, in fact, "unconditional." It sold the shares to a bank called Mediobanca under an arrangement that barred the bank from any loss or gain should the price of the stock change. The chance for gain or loss remained with IT&T. But the bank shared $2.5 million in fees that IT&T paid to have the stock taken off its hands.

The fee arrangement and other factors also raise a question as to how unrelated Mediobanca was to IT&T. The bank shared the fees with Lazard Frères Co., one of whose partners is Felix Rohatyn, a director and executive committee member of IT&T.

And according to a complaint in a new federal court suit charging IT&T, Lazard Frères and Mediobanca with failing to register its stock, Lazard Frères "exercised a degree of control" over Mediobanca's subsequent sale of the IT&T stock the bank wound up with after the Hartford merger.

Essentially, it could be argued that Mediobanca never really bought the Hartford shares at all. In substance the bank merely held the Hartford stock for IT&T until the tax problem was resolved and there was no longer any possibility that it might fall into unfriendly hands opposed to a merger, pocketing a $12-million fee for its trouble. In fact, this is essentially what the IRS has concluded, a reading of its complaint in the now-settled suit makes clear.

A class-action suit filed by a former Hartford stockholder, Hilda Herbst, in federal court last July charges that IT&T's exchange offer circular was fraudulently misleading.

The SEC suit asserted only that IT&T, Lazard Frères and Mediobanca violated U.S. securities law by failing to register with the SEC Mediobanca's sale of the IT&T stock it got. The SEC suit contains enough detailed allegations to raise questions about the IRS tax ruling.

The SEC suit was settled by a consent agreement. IT&T and the other defendants did not admit any wrongdoing, but they agreed to an injunction against any future violations of the securities law.

IT&T claims the Herbst shareholder suit is "without merit" and says it has "meritorious defenses" to the charges in that suit. The company says its application for the IRS tax ruling "was submitted in routine fashion."

If the IRS decides its tax ruling is not binding and if it decides to seek taxes now, the 17,000 former Hartford shareholders who got more than $1 billion of IT&T stock for their Hartford shares might be asked to pay many millions of dollars in taxes.

Many shareholders almost inevitably would resist paying, claiming they were misled into voting for the merger on IT&T's assurance it would be tax free. They might sue IT&T for their tax liability (Mrs. Herbst's suit seeks money for potential tax liability), or they might even sue a court to order the merger rescinded.

But little will happen, of course, unless the IRS decides to go after IT&T. And that seems unlikely.

Burns Warns Banks on Interest Rates

By Edward Cowan

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (NYT).

In a "jawboning" warning to banks and other lending institutions, Arthur P. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, asserted today that he saw no reason for "any strong upward pressure" on long-term interest rates "in the near future."

Mr. Burns' statement was the second expression of concern by a high-ranking government official in two days about the recent upward movement in short-term interest rates and the inhibiting effect it could have on economic expansion if it spreads to the long-term end of the money spectrum, particularly mortgages and consumer loans.

Herbert Stein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, expressed concern in a talk in New York Wednesday that the upward trend might "check the health of the economic expansion."

The background to these statements has been a rise in interest rates and forecasts from the banking industry, in convention this week in Dallas, that tighter money lies ahead.

Watch on Banks
Mr. Burns, speaking as chairman of the Committee on Interest and Dividends, said in a statement that the committee, "which has been keeping a close watch on the behavior of interest rates now plans to extend its surveillance to earnings of banks and other financial institutions."

He reminded the financial sector of the "important contribution that relatively stable interest rates can make, and must continue to make, to the success of the government's economic stabilization program."

Mr. Burns said, "There is little indication that the rise in short-term rates is being transmitted to the longer-term rates in which the committee is particularly interested, home mortgage rates and rates on consumer loans."

An upward movement as the economy expanded was to be expected, he said, adding: "However, the flow of savings remains at a high level and corporate liquidity and cash flow suggest that corporate demand for long-term funds will be moderate."

"An analysis of the supply-demand relationship of long-term funds indicates no basic economic reasons why there should be any strong upward pressure on these rates in the near future."

Credit Demand Higher

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (NYT)—Corporate credit demands, which were quiescent earlier in the year, are starting to climb, the Federal Reserve System reported yesterday.

At the same time, the monetary aggregates—which measure varying aspects of the availability of funds in the economy—showed a mixed pattern. Available bank reserves and the monetary base both spurred upward during the week ended Wednesday.

On the other hand, the money supply—which also increased during the week ended Oct. 4—showed a lower rate of gain in the last three months than has been characteristic for some time.

Available reserves rose at a rapid 10.5 percent annual rate over the quarter ended Wednesday, but non-borrowed bank reserves—total reserves less amounts borrowed from the Federal Reserve Bank—increased at a much slower 2.3 percent rate.

The contrast between these two rates of gain, according to some bankers, reflects the fact that the Fed has been unwilling to increase its discount rate, at which it lends to its members, from the 4 1/2 percent level in effect since last December.

The rate is now well below the cost of borrowing in the open market, and to some bankers this "subsidy rate" has been encouraging an excessive degree of monetary expansion.

Meanwhile the average rate on 90-day commercial paper rose to 5 1/4 percent from 5 1/8 percent last week, causing First National City Bank and Mellon Bank to raise their floating prime rates to 5 7/8 percent from 5 3/4 percent.

U.S. Inventories Show Strongest Rise Since May

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (AP-DJ)—Manufacturing and trade inventories climbed to a seasonally adjusted $168.3 billion in August from $155.3 billion in July, the Commerce Department reported today.

The $13-billion gain compared with a $401-million rise in July and was the largest increase in business inventories since the $102-billion boost in May.

Business sales rose 2 percent in August to an adjusted $126.19 billion from July's $123.61 billion. It was the sharpest increase since the 2.2 percent rise last March, the Commerce Department said.

Manufacturers' sales climbed 2 percent in August to an adjusted $63.19 billion. Sales of wholesalers increased 3 percent to an adjusted $25.15 billion, and retail sales climbed 1.5 percent to an adjusted $79.84 billion.

Big Board Prices Fall,
Dow Average Hits 930

By Terry Robards

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (NYT)—Prices took another pasting today in response to broad and persistent selling pressure in both glamour issues and blue chips on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones Industrial average plunged 7 and finished at 930.46, its lowest closing level since last Aug. 1. The decline brought the Dow's loss for the last three sessions of the week to 21.38.

Once again, no single news development could be blamed for the market's weakness. Rather, it appeared to stem from the continuing atmosphere of gloom that has hung over the investment community for weeks now.

Investors have lost confidence in the market's ability to pierce the psychologically important 1,000 barrier in the Dow, and Wall Street has started thinking that not even a truce in Vietnam would spark a meaningful rally.

One negative ingredient in the outlook has been the upward march of interest rates, which renders fixed-income securities relatively more attractive as investment vehicles than common stocks.

Bank stocks, led by Manhattan, were hit by selling. Chase plunged 4 1/2 to 58 1/2, following the disclosure yesterday of an earnings decline of about 10 percent in the third quarter and the resignation of the bank's president.

Other blue chips were hit equally as hard. General Motors, disclosing a strike at at least one plant and threatened stoppages at three others, nosedived 2 1/8 to 75 1/8. The decline accounted for a share of the over-all dip in the Dow Jones industrials.

Block trades were all over the ticker tape. Brunswick, the most active issue on total volume of 356,800 shares, closed down 1 1/8 at 27 7/8 after a massive block of 300,000 shares traded, apparently enabling an institution to get out.

The market was weak from the opening bell, although a feeble rally in the final half-hour of trading brought the averages back from their lowest levels of the day. Volume slackened during the comeback and totaled 12.87 million shares for the day, down from yesterday's 13.13 million.

Prices declined in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex index fell 0.06 to 25.60, while declines topped advances, 563 to 307. Turnover was 2.39 million shares, compared with 2.61 million yesterday.

Japan Prices Rise
TOKYO, Oct. 13 (Reuters)—Japan's wholesale price index for September rose 0.4 percent to 112.7 from August—a 2.6 percent rise since the beginning of this year, the Bank of Japan said today.

BOOKS

G.
By John Berger. Viking, 311 pp. $7.95.
Reviewed by Roger Jellinek

JOHN BERGER, in his new novel "G," observes that "There is an historical equilibrium in the psychological process of repression into the unconscious. Certain experiences cannot be formulated because they have occurred too soon." This is a surprising admission from a noted British art critic whose books have often been highly praised for their vigorous contemporary questions, then damned for their simplistic Marxist answers. Nevertheless, Mr. Berger here returns to his themes of political and sexual revolution, this time analyzing that historical process of repression in a profoundly arresting and intelligent fiction. "G," makes a perfect complement to two recent films in the same period, Luigi Visconti's version of Thomas Mann's "Death in Venice" and Joseph Losey's version of L. P. Hartley's "The Go-Between." Both films were vivid observations of fin de siècle class war, and both suggested the subversive potential of sexual liberation.

But whereas the films were somewhat constrained by the orthodox forms of the novels on which they were based, Mr. Berger's form is aggressively modern. He explains: "Whatever I perceive or imagine amazes me by its particularity... But I have little sense of unfolding time... I see fields where others see chapters... I write in the spirit of the geometrician... (my ellipses). The result is a sophisticated adaptation of the cubism he so much admires. While this technique frees Mr. Berger from the sentimental chronology of the traditional historical novel, it also enables him to introduce himself as a character and to enrich his story with epigrammatic perceptions, surprising metaphors and extraordinary meditations on sex, politics and society. The deceptively informal effect is belied by an intense, spare prose, deployed with great precision.

"G" is a kind of biography, the progress of a revolutionary Don Giovanni whose sexual exploits lead him from passive innocence to existential awareness and finally a mission of raising the revolutionary consciousness of the women he seduces. He was born in 1887, the illegitimate son of a wealthy Italian merchant and his English mistress. G. is brought up by an uncle and aunt on the remnants of an English estate. His uncle is a passionate horseman and like the rest of his class in its historical crisis of the industrial revolution, he has made a chivalric play of his life: "Such men feel like gods because they have the impression of imposing an aesthetic order upon nature merely by the timing and style of their own formal interventions." G's aunt, to escape his order by marry a cavalry officer, leaving him to fight for the Empire in the Boers in the wilds of Africa.

G. is reunited with his p in industrial Milan. It is 189 mother has become a Fabian disembodied talk and "slap His aging father wants h an heirloom. "In the hist his own life (G.) is older they; about the history own life their innocence than like children." It is and the Milanese workers risen in one of those p waves of 19th-century Eu revolt. G. witnesses n th moment of confrontation: a cavalry charges a barricade returns to the farm, and is ed by his aunt. For her it act of independence, for i is the beginning of a reve
